

CHAPTER – 18

DEVELOPMENTAL BASICS OF A COUNTRY: A GROSS

PICTURE

Development of a country is a very deterministic task by way of laying foundations of various schemes to bring about transformations in the social life. The policies of development are deterministic is an essential requirement. As such developmental views are generated by keeping in mind the past history of development and a gross understanding of the particular agenda with which the developmental ground is associated. Development is earmarked in various stages and various agencies are involved to achieve prospects of fruitful views which as such help in bringing about transformation in the social life. Development involves particular categorization of channeling resources of life cycle such that people can help themselves out of the problems they face with. Development as such is a life cycle to provide food to the much needy poor people who are not categorized with fruitful living. Development is associated such that resources of the country can be utilized in a more effective way by paving way for employment opportunities, poverty alleviation and transformation in social life.

The development should always be in clause as deterministic because then we can realize the purpose of utilization of resources as an optimum attribute. If the clause in development is associated as an approximate prospect then the clause in utilization of resources can become an overdose prescription and can harm the monetary perspectives of the strategy. The clause in development should be attributed as deterministic because for realization of policy in public we need to have clear understanding and needs to be virtuous enough to guide the monetary folds of the policy. Only virtuous policies should be in clause for development such that we ensure the directives of optimum utilizations with full monetary justice to the beneficiaries of development. The grants to developmental policies cannot be in large quantities thus we need to have the above understanding. The process of development should be a two way initialization between public and leader such that we gain in continuous prospects about the developmental policy. The policies of development are always such that it is always difficult to make judgments ahead of the initiation thus it should be made mandatory that attributes of public engrossed in history or the living attributes of the populations be first analyzed and kept on threshold to demarcate the layout of the policy. The public in general is attributed to certain features in open arenas. It is these attributes we need to harness for gains in developmental channelization. The initiator engrossed in public features should exploit the existing advantages to the developmental policy by being virtuous to the agencies of development and lay the developmental footing on strong base. The development on the part of the government should feature the attributes as being virtuous to the public and deeply entrenched in the welfare of the masses with eradication of their problems. The particular categorization should uphold the rationale of development as it unfolds for various strata of populations. The philosophy of development is always for the benefits to the populations by being virtuous and engrossed in optimum utilization of the resources for the welfare of mankind.

Developmental association involves particular stages whereby the prospects are achievable within the amount of resources at hand. Development as such cannot be associated as an abrupt phenomenon whereby there is abrupt transformation from very low to very high perspectives. Such type of development is grossly misunderstood and the developmental fruits are run barren by the misconception of the phenomenon. Development of a country can be called as true development if the people of the country show confidence in the works of the government. Development should thus be brought about uniformly throughout the country so that the people of the country show confidence in the works of the government. It is thus foreseen that resources of the country should be invested uniformly and equally among various fields such that there is an active pace in development. It should be in clause as unfair if large amount of resources are invested in one of the field and some of the fields are left neglected. Development should be such that it addresses the problems of the people in true picture. Development should be uniformly associated throughout the country such that all regions of the country can be based with prospects. If there is need to provide basic amenities to the citizens it should be provided to all of the citizens of the country. Development should be categorized in stages such that people feel a conceptual understanding of that phenomenon. Development involves effective utilization of the resources at hand. Development is a channel of activity whereby different agencies are involved in a coordinated fashion to achieve the targets of development. Development as such is not a wholesome approach but is based with transformations within the reach of resources at hand. Developmental views are associated only after the particular phenomenon puts an impediment in the way of new targets which are foreseen in future. As for example if the natural fertilizers are insufficient for productivity than the task of providing productive fertilizers may be handed over to some agency which will fulfill the task.

The developmental prospects if located in the monetary benefits to the populations then it would be a prudent approach that we seek developmental folds within the amount of resources at hand. The prudence would appear virtuous when laying the course in open arenas. The attributes of development would manifest on the face of mankind and no ugly outlook can be represented to the developmental grounds. The stage of development would seek virtues only on grounds of easy acceptability to the public and the course will manifest as highly congenial to monetary powers of the public which as such is the success criteria for developmental folds. The success criteria's for development is to be realized in public acceptability which has to cater to the needs of the public. The manifestation of the particular stage of development must be truly adaptable to success criteria's. The prospects of development should be for welfare of the people but limitations on monetary folds limits the clause of development thus it is wise to initiate the process of development only when needs in people arise. This would act as safeguard against monetary powers being expressed superfluously.

Developmental views are forecasted after a particular stage of achievement such that much more effective transformation can be brought about which will provide more readiness to prospects of works. When a new stage of development is laid down than it is essential that proper work force is available to achieve the targets. Thus the foundation of laying the new stage requires that prior effort was associated to create the workforce for the new targets. Thus developmental grounds are laid keeping in view the potential of the work force available. The perspective such as above it is essential that proper coordinated effort is based such that various stages of developmental effects are kept on stake. Thus development will be associated only when various agencies provide a concentrated effort in their field such that all views associated with development can be easily fulfilled. Thus to forecast an approach if the country wants to base itself with export oriented economy than quality of the product is important. To produce a good quality product raw material should be of good quality and labor should also be of good quality. So it is essential that prior work input is done such that both are readily satisfied. Similarly if the industrial base of the country is to be given strength than there should be quality education for labor force, production of the raw material and a convenient environment at home such that fruits of industrialization can be easily reaped.

Development is not a wholesome quantity but flourishes in stages. There are various stages of development. At first looking at the country it is essential to keep various perspectives in mind. For the country food is essential so the first stage of development requires that agriculture is given top priority. So it is essential that ample food production is done such that food is easily available for the people of the country. It is essential that food prices are kept at minimum low so that people of the country can easily purchase food. If in food production once say self sufficiency is reached in food grains, cereals and vegetables than efforts should be made such that fruits are also readily available to the people. Once self sufficiency is achieved in agriculture then effort should be made to provide basic necessities to the people of the country. So water reservoirs, sanitation facilities and electrical power houses should be built for basic necessities to the people. Once basic necessities are been provided then proper infrastructural base of the country should be built such that industry can be built in the country. So these are the primary stages of development involved. Than over the periods of years long concentrated effort is done in these fields such that these aspects are truly associated with all citizens of the country. Once the above basics are truly associated with the people and self sufficiency is reached in these fields than more important work of coordinating the resources of the country should be done. So the co-ordination of the resources of the country involves that various agencies be established to identify the true potential of the country. So in various fields of work culture educational institutes of relevance should be opened to train students. The work culture fields of Engineering sciences, medical sciences, management sciences plays a major role in shaping the developmental folds of the country. Then various central offices should be built such that development of the country can be properly channelized. So to undertake development it comes to the fore that development is not a wholesome perspective but is brought about in stages. The various stages of development are under developed stage, developing stage and developed stage. Under developed stage involves providing basic necessities and infrastructure to the people, developing stage involving reaping the fruits to all citizens of the country and developed stage means the developing stage is complete thus all citizens are enriched with developmental facilities hence the country has achieved self sufficiency in all fields of work.

Development of a country is highly marked by the resources in the country. Developmental policies take into account their responsibilities to future generations. Development tends to follow past history of developmental basics where it is categorized how effectively the resources were put to use. Development is always followed keeping in view the nature of citizens and the quality of development is based with the type of populations entailed by the country. Development is highly marked by the characteristics of the populations thus for example seventy percent of the Indian populations reside in villages so lot of resources of development should be based with agriculture. Effort should be made to associate developmental grounds with these masses as it will provide recourse of livelihood to large number of people residing in villages. The industry of the country is always based on agriculture. Development should be grounded into the potential of the population and not in to other aspects so that we don't have to beg for resources. Development is always for the population of the country and for the much needed aspects of removing poverty, providing literacy and employment opportunities. If the industry is to be supported in the country then it should provide recourse of livelihood to large number of people by way of self employment and employment with the industry. The whole purpose of setting up of industrial base in the country is not to provide money to private purse but to fulfill the needs of common citizens of the country. The needs of the common citizens are employment opportunities in various forms.

Development should not be a showy affair. The developmental effort should be in purpose. The developmental effort should generate fruits for the common people. Thus developmental effort should be grounded in real value prospects which will yield direct fruits to the citizens. Developmental effort should not be a showy business such as of building highways, expensive electrification or decorative coaches in railways. Developmental effort with showy perspective is a waste of money. Development should be realized in real terms with purpose. Development should be like opening up of handicrafts factory or investing in raising production levels in agriculture or bringing about renovation to generate employment opportunities and such similar aspects. Development of a country should be on basics as providing large number of employment opportunities, expansion of business channels to enhance business, raising production levels in various sectors of the economy, opening up of small scale industry to support needs of the poor people and such similar views. Developmental basics as developing highways of the country is a very expensive effort and the fruits of this expenditure will only be in meager terms because developing highways for business enhancement requires that regions are also developed equally such that large amount of business can be carried along in the regions otherwise the amount of business would remain the same. Thus it is foreseen that there should be a set priority in developmental approach such that all aspects for the country are prioritized and transformed otherwise the fruits of development will only come in meager terms. If industry is to be supported heavily than priorities should be set and if industrialization is the aim of the country than cottage industry of the country should be supported which supports large masses of the population otherwise it may lose its course.

For effective development to take place there should be spirit of service in mind and not spirit of egotism to dominate the human faculties. The people should base themselves with truthful aspects for livings such that there is proper coordination of work culture throughout regions, cities and country. Basing with truthful aspects for livings brings forth all views about work culture as of crystal clear and decisions as regard to work culture can be easily associated. When ego is prevalent than true modes of life are kept aside and cunningness, brutality, misappropriation becomes the channels of work culture. Under this cover no decision can be associated as at all places false propaganda is dominant. The channels of work culture are blocked and misappropriation is seen in all streams of life. By way of following on false modes in life development is fictitious such that there is gross misunderstanding where the development has taken place. The developmental workings of true modes for life are characterized in real terms with fruitful results whereas developmental workings of false modes in life are fictitious as never to be realistic and fruitful.

Development should always be in real terms with purpose. The development should always be realized with an aim such that very clause of neglect is associated with proper grounds. Development should be grounded in the human face such that results are in clause very fruitful. Development grounded in human face has far reaching implications. As such if development is grounded in human face than its effect is characterized by the whole society and society feels a sense of relief thus pleasure of having to be characterized with that behavior. Once human face is transformed then if life outside the society is transformed appropriately then human face cannot grossly misunderstand the meaning of development. Development than has achieved its purpose and new stage of transformation is readily thus easily accommodated. As for example if the income of the families has reached a certain stable value than if luxuries are provided to the families than they would be easily accommodated. On the other hand if income of the families are low than provision of luxuries only dismantles the fabric of social life.

Development should always be for the welfare of mankind. Development should be uniformly accommodated in the citizens of the country. Thus development terminologies used in the modern world is equitable distribution of wealth, removal of poverty and illiteracy, provision of self employment and direct employment, raising production levels in agriculture, building technical base in the country. Provision of safe drinking water and sanitation facilities, increasing rural electrification, raising standard of living to international level, increasing policy of self reliance in all fields, development of regions and states etc.

For effective development to take place there should be a coordinated effort by various streams of expertise. Thus there should be a central authority to coordinate and guide the course of development. This central authority should be familiar with the outlook of the country, its traditions and culture, the resources of the country should be well demarcated such that there is no misappropriation in developmental outlooks within the reach of resources at hand. This central authority should coordinate the works of various agencies and lay course for future needs of these various agencies such that proper coordination of work culture can be associated. The central agency should work on the traditions and culture of the country such that no ugly outlook is presented to developmental effort. The central authority should guide the course of development by surveys throughout the country such that needy people are easily on anvil for support. The central authority should work through for long terms so that targets are always within reach. The central authority should periodically evaluate the performance of various developmental projects such that misappropriations in the developmental effort are neglected. The whole purpose of central authority is to coordinate and guide various agencies to the course of development by setting targets through planning which are to be accomplished in long terms by planning.

Development in most of the countries is followed on the lines of Western culture. Development is grounded as only by following on the policies of West development can be associated. An effort should be directed to translate the Western values to regional culture such that the Western dominance on development can be curtailed. Development as such is grounded in to the potential of the populations such that the clause as India is an agricultural society it is essential that Western culture or dominance of developmental folds be translated to Indian values. The authorization of Western world is predominantly in technological aspects so the technology of Western world should be ameliorated to serve the Indian society in Indian form. The modern day practice should be totally associated with Indian values otherwise too much of following on Western culture will destroy the harmony in Indian society. Development is a high found charisma which will be fruitful only if it translates to Indian values otherwise a Western culture will divide the Indian society into Western culture and Indian culture. Prospects of Indian origin are in agricultural society so prospects of the Indian society should be based with agricultural society so that growth of Indian perspectives will be high and thus far bring about greater harmony in the life of Indian population otherwise basing on Western perspectives for development will only divide the Indian society into two parts of Western followers and Indian followers with loss of harmony in Indian society.

Development should base itself as increased understanding among people and should not result in falling out rightly on each other thus creating chaos. It is essential that as the process of growth takes place there is increased understanding among people such that new ventures of growth are easily achievable. The process of development should not be such that there is increased amount of tensions in the people and people put on blames on each other for not being able to keep pace with the life cycle. The process of development should be grounded in the Indian face in the people by inculcating values of service and hard work. They should be devoted to each other in cause and work for excellence in their field to reach out to large populations such that much of the hard work of their service removes most of the problems of the Indian population. As for example if Indian Industry works through understanding of the Indian populations than greater prospects are achievable rather than creating price wars in the Indian society. Thus the notion of development should be equality. If you work through unity of masses than larger growth prospects are achievable rather than dividing the society into rich and poor for economic agenda. Thus there should be political stability in the country and economic justice should be followed such that there is unity among masses. Possibilities of development are present only when human mind is devoted to the cause in society and has made up his mind to achieve prospects in life. Growth levels are forecasted only when man has the propulsion to achieve more in life thus hard work puts him on growth levels to be achieved as forecasted.

Development should not be a burden in the hands of authorities. Development should be associated in proper quality and be devised in the hands of authorities as true services for mankind. This as such means that malpractices in an association of developmental grounds should be minimized and full devotion for service to people should be based. Development thus should be based in the hands of those people those who are totally devoted to its cause and politicization of developmental policies should be minimized to extreme ends. The development as such is a high found charisma which can only be based with charismatic people totally devoted to its cause whereas politicization of developmental policies will only damage the prospects of developmental basics. The persons who are totally devoted to the cause for developmental grounds have thorough understandings of the developmental grounds and can thus provide good quality of service whereas persons with political aim of development work on selfish grounds without taking the reality in to true picture.

Developmental folds should thus be laid only into those hands those who are capable to curtail the element of politics in developmental policies.

In developmental policies it should be always weighed as to how much resources are to be used because too much use of resources may lead to depletion of resources which will be in shortage for use by future generations. So long term policy of maintaining resources for future plans should be kept in mind such that we serve the responsibility to future generations. Resources should be used in an optimum manner such that wastage of resources is prevented. Excessive use of resources at one time will only prove extravagance and would not in clause as optimum use of resources. Thus resources should be used only for useful purposes and not to show extravagance. Preventing illegal cutting of trees should prevent the forest reserves of the country from fallout of depletion. The natural reserves of the country should be kept safeguarded such that we don't have to succumb in future for lack of resources.

Developmental policies of the country should address the problems of the people in true picture. Thus as and when need in the people arises developmental polices should effectively be made for those needs. A proverb for developmental aspects is it should be demarcated when need in the people arise. As for example if electric supply is not adequately served to the citizens than additional electric supply should be arranged on demand for the people. If there is neglect in addressing problems of the people at large than it poses a threat to the stability of the society and has far reaching consequences. Developmental policies are justified only when they provide justice to the society. Long term planning in developmental policies should be adopted by keeping adequate reserves to meet the demand when it arises. Thus when a developmental policy is started it should manage its affair in such perspectives that reserves for the future is also taken care of. A small percentage of savings should go to the reserves so that we don't fall prey in future. National policies and state policies should always work with certain amount of reserves to serve the people in times of need.

Developmental policies should provide true justice to the people of the country. Developmental policies should thus work on principles of providing social equality and economic equality to all its citizens. Thus those channels of society who are not in clause with proper living should first be placed on agenda of developmental policies. Developmental policies should identify the creamy layer and non creamy layer of the society then work out policies to associate social or economic advantage to these deprived sections of the society. Developmental policies in national outlook should be framed with slightly biased grounds in favor of non creamy sections of the society. Developmental policy may thus be devised to provide free education, medicine, food, clothing and shelter. Developmental policies may be devised as to provide representation to weaker sections of society in national legislatures and local body governance. Thus far whole objective of providing social and economic justice will only come true if the developmental policies are framed in such a manner so as to serve the purpose otherwise words will not become deeds. Developmental policies should thus provide centers of such objectives as to provide direct benefits to the neglected sections of the society.

In the task of nation building and providing direct support to the developmental policies it is essential that we properly demarcate excellent academic potential of the country as well as demarcate excellent entrepreneurs of the country. Development will only be successful if it is characterized by expertise of the academicians and successfulness of the entrepreneurs. Thus to be in clause with these icons we have to provide top class education facilities to top brass of academicians of the country and as well as provide top class of social environment to ensure successfulness of excellent entrepreneurs. Thus highest brass of academicians should be provided excellent opportunities in life and higher standard of living such that they make their academics a success a provisional clause for serving the nation. The highest brass of academicians should be involved in nation's developmental folds and policies such that high quality of success can be based with the developmental grounds. The successful entrepreneurs of the country should be in clause advantageously in the task of developmental grounds. The successful entrepreneurs will provide adequate coverage of excellent life prospects to all citizens of the country and their social understandings will pave the way for younger generations to follow on their footsteps.

Developmental policies of the country should be progressive in nature such that future needs of the citizens are adequately served. Developmental policies should be framed with grounds of expansion in future as of involving more people into its foothold such that expansion procedures are easily solved. Developmental policies should be framed with clauses of raising production levels, providing recourse of livelihood to more people or increasing level of facilities to its citizens. Developmental policies should be always grounded in progressively increasing its capacity to opening new ventures to serve more people as a constant endeavor. Developmental policies if are not progressive then they will be rendered baseless in future when demand increases to new heights. Developmental policies of stagnation act as an attitude of deprivation for future generations who are equally in need of same developmental folds as of present. Developmental policies of progressive nature serve the society better in the form of natural harmony among its citizens.

For all round development to take place the country should be grounded with international understanding. It is thus far essential that to be able to stand in the comity of nations the developmental policies of the country should be in clause with fair grounds of truthfulness, justice based society and welfare of the poor people. The international standing of the nation will come true only if the citizens of the country are provided justice in the society, the societal folds of the country are in clause with truth in behavior and poor people of the country are seen in need of support. Development is justified when the country effectively serves these three parameters. Development based on unfairness and brutal behavior is not in clause justifiable in any part of the society. Such type of development as such is not meant for the people but is based with individualistic approach. This unfair development puts an impediment in standings with international community who have based their development on fairness in behavior and practice. The unfair development leads to loss of standing in international community and all round development of the country is affected. The loss in international standing leads to loss of business opportunities and relational bias leads to shortage of avenues of new outlook.

Developmental policies should be framed only when the will of the people is strong. When will of the people is strong than developmental effort will come out to be true success. The people will be totally devoted to the developmental clause and all shortcomings of the developmental effort will be effectively encountered. When will of the people is strong people will find time to participate in developmental effort and give their comments on various developmental aspects. Developmental policies should never be framed when people show orthodox attitude in society. When people show orthodox attitude than they will put number of impediments in the way of developmental effort and thus whole developmental effort will only be a show of waste of resources. Developmental effort when people show orthodox behavior will only be an exercise of fruits in paradise with no attachment to reality. Developmental effort will thus be only on papers and people will not be taking services of the developmental effort in true picture.

Developmental policies thus far should prevent regional biases in its working. Developmental policies should be framed with universal applications approach because than resources of the country would be of much greater use, results of developmental efforts will be far reaching thus uniformity in country's culture and traditions will be adequately seen. Developmental policies framed with favors for regional attributes gives thrust to regionalism and puts an impediment on universal growth prospects. Regions which are more developed will be rich in culture and traditions. By way of giving strength to regionalism national integration is disturbed and political stability is threatened which leads to adverse impact on the developmental prospects. Regionalism divides the societal behavior such that people are forced to live in regional zones which lead to adverse effect on business prospects. Regionalism leads to some regions being built rather beautifully and richly while other regions suffer from poverty. Regionalism distorts the fabric of growth and people lead a poor life style because of regionalism.

Development should be undertaken only when people exhibit purposeful way of living. The people of the region must be living according to established laws and exhibiting universal brotherhood for the cause of society and nation. Regions where people do not show brotherhood with unity should not be in clause with development as it places in itself as an act of unlawful activity and means in itself as giving strength to unlawful activities. Political association must not guide development for political purposes as this also leads to bias attitudes prevalent in the society.

Development must thus be based only when people show purposeful way of living and abide by law in their lifestyle. Development should be only to provide means of livelihood to citizens in regions of poor lifestyle and should not be associated with infrastructural development as this would only be waste of resources as these structures would not be used for meaningful purposes.

Development in social life should be associated with values along with inheritance to parental past history. Basing the society with values has the implications of brighter growth for the society as development is characterized by growth of value culture in the society. The value culture of the society should be well respected such that people owe their life towards values and this as such is very helpful in the growth of the nation. The younger generation would be given a positive thinking and they would strive to achieve high values in the society. If people are all devoted to inculcating values as basics in life than foundation of a strong nation can be easily laid. Apart from basing value culture in the society an inheritance from parental past history should be attached with the value culture. When parental past history is attached with value culture than social life of the people will remain to be dignified and value based culture will attain full authority in life. Thus clauses of marriage should be based with persons of like attitude so that there is no misunderstanding on life association.

The society should base itself with positive personalization for social life. Universal brotherhood should be based in social culture and habit of providing support to each other's cause should be associated in social life. The problems of the society should be well addressed and there should be unity in masses to combat the evils of society. If all are in clause with positive attributes in life then such type of aspects can be easily tackled in societal behavior. Thus society should inculcate habits of supporting issues of bravery, extraordinary social service and other such aspects which help in combating the evils of society. Personalization as such is very effective for business growths and pressed with hard work will easily remove most of the problems of the people who are low on social counts.

As process of growth takes place in the society new heights are achieved in the society and some hard problems are faced by the society at the end. These hard problems of life may impose threat to developmental prospects. Thus subsiding modes of development should be characterized by favorable policies. The government policies should be of support for subsiding modes of development in the form of rehabilitation for the lost developmental modes. The industry is always faced with problems in meeting the new technological grounds and lot of its employees are thrown out as they remain no more skillful, so the government policies should be of support to these people in the form of rehabilitation. Also as industrial processes takes new heights lot of small scale industries face the problems of extinction thus government should develop such modes of development that small scale industry can be supported with much greater strength.

The modes of social culture should be very simple grounds. The simplicity of social culture will provide much greater understanding and henceforth will provide higher views for attainment rather than basing the society with complex culture such that lot of misdemeanor enter into social life with lot of misunderstanding leading to loss of cohesion in the society. Thus police should be based with perspectives of punishing crimes of thefts, creating unnecessary havoc in society and preventing rights of the persons to lead to their work. Such basic aspects if curtailed in the society will lead to greater social understanding and the people can be grounded with simple positive attitudes in life. Complexity on above issues generally jeopardizes prospects for livings and leads to lot of misunderstanding in the society.

The political culture in the society should be so based that people feel secure in their life and feel free to exercise their will such that all works can be achieved with much simplicity. Thus political culture should be of providing support for exercising free authority by the people in their works so that people can be based with simple attitudes to achieve prospects in life. Thus people should not be bothered by unsocial elements such that it imposes a consequent threat to free exercise of their authority. There should be respect to the basic rights of the people under law such that people feel free to exercise their will and human understanding of much higher grounds can be achieved.

The younger generation of the country is the foundation of future and leaders of the future. Thus child growth prospects should be associated with soft attitude and care such that it provides them simple understanding of life grounds which as such is the root of all prospects to be associated in future. Thus younger generation should be provided with support for understanding the social issues and values so that they can support themselves in adequate nature for building the foundations of future.

Political culture should be an association as of addressing problems of the people at large by associating habits of service and providing rights to the people such that societal behavior is of sound perspectives thus they are not in clause with biased attitudes in life. Thus far political culture should not be such that individuals try to rule the spirit of the society by political strength while grabbing power for individual gains. The political culture should be of providing rights to the citizens and should not be such that all modes of life are geared for individual gains for grabbing power at large. Development should be associated with business growths such that higher business growths lead to larger share of development. Thus far it should be a practice that all citizens are geared in such modes that no stone is left unturned for building up of business growths. Thus business streams should be adequately supported with full fervor such that there are lots of employment opportunities for people and there are vast numbers of opportunities for self employment such that life can be maintained of higher standards while all aspects of nation's problems can be addressed through business growths.

Ground reality in the life of the citizen should be well oriented so that they understand the hurdles they face in their endeavor of support to life. By associating themselves with ground realities the people will try to achieve prospects in right measures and this as such will provide brighter future for the development in the country. The people should be well oriented towards supports for life by realizing the ground realities they face in having to achieve their purpose.

The natural sanctity of the agricultural society should not be changed by modes of development for brighter growth prospects. The life in agricultural society is of feeble aspects such that small hindrances in their life can produce havoc in their social life. This as such means that if modes of development are too much adamant on developmental clauses than their social life may be jeopardized to large magnitudes and hence forth will be an act of tyranny on poor people. The poor people should be regarded with sympathy such that all is well in their life and people do not try to snatch away the static political life based with them. The hindrances the agricultural society face are that of nakedness and violence in movies, the social coils of being discarded in the society and modern perceptions of life which put pressures on their resources. Such type of attitudes may jeopardize their prospects. Also evils of caste system, uneducated folds based with them all produce havoc in their life.

The developmental strategies should be so associated that maintenance of subsistence level of livings for the agricultural society is always kept at stake in the efforts for seeking development. The subsistence level of living should be maintained by demarcating rights to the agricultural society in the form of old age pensions, subsidized food provisions or provision of associating their life prospects with political associations for direct relief by way of power and authority. The natural tendency of development should be associated with removing evils of poverty and illiteracy in their life such that their future grounds can be felt secured. There should be attitudes of modern world in their life such that they remain well versed with modern ways of living.

For maintaining decorum of understanding with modern ways in livings the agricultural society should be provided facilities of education in their life. Provision for education in the modes of development is essential in improving their social life and providing adequate support to be able to withstand the modern ways of living. Only by education the social life of the agricultural society can be kept intact in form which brings in greater understanding among people such that unsocial elements in their life can be reduced. The prospects of education in the life of agricultural society would lead to integration with the social life of cities such that agricultural society would also claim to be social as of city life. They should be integrated in the modern world for basing in prospects for the country such that most of the symptoms of self regard in the modern world can be kept at stake.

Modes of production in agricultural society cannot change rapidly as it is very difficult for adaptations on grounds of lack of resources and understanding. The agricultural society is resistive in modes of adopting modern methods of production so they should be provided grounds of understanding the modern methods of production. They should be given free education about the benefits of modern methods of production. The agricultural society should be given support in the form of loans on subsidized rates so that adaptability to modern methods of production is easily feasible. Modes of production should not be changed rapidly as they may not agree to adapt themselves too folds on monetary grounds and lack of resources may jeopardize their prospects.

The agricultural society should be protected from overshadows of luxurious postures as it leads to increase in feuds with anarchy in their behavior leading to threatening of social life of the people to much larger extent. The agricultural society is highly uneducated class of people such that exposure to luxuries leads to upheavals as self esteem of uneducated mind leads to show of authority in the society in the form of anarchy at all over places. Thus as such agricultural society should be protected from movie cultures, provisions of sound life of comfort but should be kept on basics of developing work culture such that they do not show their feuds in the society.

The agricultural society is a neglected class of people such that there is little voice of their problems in the echelons of power. Moreover loss of communication gaps with echelons of power may jeopardize their life prospects to much larger extents. Thus it is essential that agricultural society should be given full representation in the echelons of power such that their reasons are always well established in power centers. The power centers should be built on the basis of representing the agricultural society in right quantity. This makes the social life of the agricultural people always on support for realizing their problems in realistic modes.

Nostalgic perspectives in agricultural societies should be well protected for preventing mass upheavals. The rudeness of the agricultural people always comes true in the form of violence and arson such that life of the people is measured in pennies. Henceforth there is always a threat to the life of persons thus it is essential to keep the culprits of creating violence always on check by police actions such that mass upheavals in the national life are kept on check. The power centers should be represented to the people of truthful nature otherwise political movements always become a cause for violence and this should be prevented.
